

COMPLETE & BALANCED ARMORS – by BloodNAsheS

MOD PURPOSE AND DESIGN

This rather large mod involves doing primarily three things as explained below:

1) Complete the armor sets from the original game by adding the missing pieces to different armors to form a full set (e.g. adding bracers, greaves, pauldrons, and boots to the dreugh armor, which formerly had only a helm shield, and cuirass). Every armor style in the original game now is a complete set, with the meshes chosen by the best-looking and rated mods online. In addition, to even out the number of armor styles for each type of armor, some new lore-appropriate, and likewise good-looking and high-rated, armor styles have been added in, making the total number of full armor sets now 45 with 15 for each type of armor. The various changes and the credits to the mods used is listed below.

2) Balance out the armors so that there is a reason to use any armor at any given level, rather than every light armor user wearing glass and heavy daedric. This is by following the below rules.

2a) The lighter the piece of armor, the better its enchant value. This follows the game logic of clothing being more enchant-able than armor, and applies it to armor, rather than simply giving better armor better enchant values as well.

2b) Related to the above, light armor is also always cheaper than heavier armors, with the reason being to maximize its effectiveness (that is, taking advantage of its high enchant values) will generally require additional cost and/or effort.

3b) Although heavier armor is more expensive and has a lower enchant, it always has a higher armor and better health values, meaning not only does it provide the most protection but that it degrades slower. For this and all other rules stated above various logical formulas are used to calculate these values which change evenly by armor "rank" according to the tables listed below in this document.

3) Add the new and altered armors to the game, by integrating them both into the random leveled loot lists and by making them available through merchants. All armor pieces are now available to purchase, although higher rank armors can only be found on one, often difficult to access or obscure to find, NPC, cost an extremely high amount of gold, and do not re-stock. Furthermore, higher rank armors cannot be found in random loot, to maintain balance.

To install, extract the .rar (requires WinRar) according to the appropriate folders: DataFiles/Meshes/CB, Data Files/Icons/CB, Data Files/Textures, and Data Files for the .esp file. This mod requires the original games and both expansions (or the Game of the Year edition) to run properly. It works with existing savegames, however there may be conflicts with other mods that alter armor stats.
